

SANGALLI INSTITUTE AWARD
FOR THE RELIGIOUS HISTORY
2020

Art. 1. The purpose of the award

The Sangalli Institute for the religious history and cultures, within the ‘Premio Ricerca Città di Firenze’, in collaboration with the Department of University and Research of the Municipality of Florence and with the Firenze University Press, supports no. 2 awards for the publication of unpublished and peer-reviewed monographs, in Italian, English and the other principal European languages, presented by young researchers and concerning the religious history from Middle Ages to the Contemporary Era. This initiative is intended to reach one of the goals of the Sangalli Institute, in order to support the scientific research, especially that of young researchers, fostering a wider circulation of their works by the open access publication.

Art. 2. The awards

The awards consist of the publication of two monographs, chosen by a specific committee working through a peer-review process. The essays, without any geographical, cultural and thematic boundaries, must concern

The Religious History from Middle Ages to the Contemporary Era, also intended in an interdisciplinary and inter-religious way.

The two monographs will appear into the dedicated book series of the Institute and will be published and distributed both in paper and digital edition through the on line catalogue of the Firenze University Press and any other operators related to the editor, in order to spread at most their circulation. The books must have a maximum of about 300 pages (black and white photographs) and they will be provided with an ISBN number, both for the paper and the digital edition. The digital edition will be published open access and fully downloading. The awards will be delivered by the President of the Institute and by the University and Research Councillor of the Municipality of Florence. The authors will receive no. 50 copies free of their book by the Sangalli Institute.

Art. 3. Copyright

The awarded publications will be ruled by an editorial agreement, in compliance with this call for publications. The agreement will be signed between the Firenze University Press and the author in conformance with the 'Creative Commons Public Licenses'.

Art. 4. The making of the book

The Firenze University Press will specify to the winners every editorial instruction in order to deliver the essay in a camera ready format. The authors will have the task of proof-reading.

Art. 5. The standards and the procedure of the selection

The selection will be made by a judging Committee, composed of the following professors:

Paolo Branca (Università cattolica del Sacro Cuore di Milano)

Lucia Ceci (Università degli studi di Roma Tor Vergata)

Massimo Carlo Giannini (Università degli studi di Teramo)

Raimondo Michetti (Università degli studi Roma Tre)

Kenneth Stow (The Haifa Center for Mediterranean History)

During its first meeting, the Committee will appoint a President, a Secretary and will establish the standards of the selection which will evaluate the manuscripts.

The Committee will have the possibility to take advantage of some external referees, if suitable. The Committee will operate in conformity with the standards established into the 'Linee Guida Anvur' for the Valutazione della Qualità della Ricerca (VQR), evaluating the contribution to the progress of the specific branch of knowledge as far as the significance and the originality, offered by the presented manuscripts.

The decision of the Committee is final and their members can ask to the winners to review their essays in view of the publication. If the candidate refuses to do it, or if he/she does not achieve the approval by the Committee regarding the changes he/she have made, he/she will be deprived of the award by a simple communication of the Committee and a scroll in the merit ranking will immediately take place.

The Sangalli Institute will make available its headquarters for the selection. The proclamation of the winners will be known no later than 31st December 2020.
